

Accounting Resource Newsletter features Cabinet NG

QuickBooks Enterprise Solutions is Intuit's accounting software solution for growing businesses. Its benefits were showcased at the recent QuickBooks Enterprise Solutions User Conference in Phoenix, Arizona.

The Conference provided something for everyone from end users to third party developers. Conference attendees were offered practice labs to learn more about the software with Enterprise Solutions developers on hand to answer questions.

"The theme of the conference was growth. Growth for mid-sized business owners who use Enterprise Solutions. Intuit's founder, Scott Cook, gave a speech about growth for his company," said Lisa McCarthy.

Intuit invited Lisa to the conference to take part in the professional advisor group. Her role was networking with other fellow professional advisors, to answer questions from end users and to get a better idea on Intuit's market for Enterprise Solutions.

A big hit with conference participants was the Enterprise Solutions Showcase. More than 20 add-on solutions that extend Enterprise Solutions capabilities were on display.

One of those solutions was a document management company out of Huntsville, AL called Cabinet NG (www.cabinetng.com). Cabinet NG stands for Cabinet Next Generation, says its president Andrew Bailey.

Cabinet NG software allows its user to run a paperless office. Paper documents are scanned and turned into electronic images. While viewing the images on the screen, the operator enters information about the transaction. With the click of a button, the data is sent to QuickBooks Enterprise and the image is filed in Cabinet NG.

"Once you move up from a small- to a mid-market business, document management and workflow become necessary tools in the office," said Bailey.

"Our purpose at the conference was to educate QuickBooks enterprise users on what document management is and how our product helps them grow their business," Bailey added.
